Descriptive Text

What is a Descriptive Text?

A descriptive text is a text that describes a particular person, place, animal, or thing in detail. Its social function is to describe the characteristics of the object so that the reader can imagine it clearly.

Generic structure: identification introduces the object being described. Description gives the details such as parts, qualities, and characteristics of the object.

Language features: simple present tense, for example She has long black hair; adjectives such as beautiful, tall, and friendly; and linking verbs such as is, are, and has.

Example and Practice

Example: My Cat. I have a cat named Luna. She is a small white cat with blue eyes. Luna has soft fur and a long tail. She is very active and likes playing with a ball. Every morning she waits for me at the door.

Practice: describe your best friend in five sentences. Use at least three adjectives and the simple present tense. Mention appearance, personality, and one hobby.
